

Noemi Schneider / GOLDEN COSMOS

Ludwig and the Rhinoceros

Translator: Marshall Yarbrough

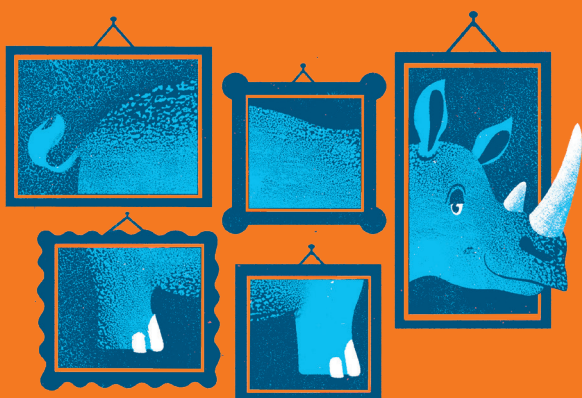

Hardcover printed with three spot colors on tinted paper

40 pages / ages 5-9 / ISBN: 978-0-7358-4527-5 / US $19.95 / CAN $26.95

On Sale: 5-Sep-2023

“There’s a rhinoceros in my room!” claims Ludwig. His father doesn’t believe him. There CAN’T be a rhinoceros in Ludwig’s room. It’s way too small for a rhinoceros. But Ludwig shows his father that something can be there, even when you can’t see it.

Ludwig Wittgenstein discussed this philosophical problem of seeing and perception with his professor Bertrand Russell. It is the basis for Noemi Schneider’s humorous bedtime story for aspiring philosophers. The Berlin duo GOLDEN COSMOS, who work with their characteristic screen printing style for international magazines, are now illustrating a picture book for the first time.

Have you seen a rhinoceros?

North South

www.northsouth.com

Here is his horn

- Pop out and fold horn (fold flaps inwards)
- A tip for tiny noses: Thread ribbon through punched holes and tie
- Take a picture of your rhinoceros in an unusual place!
- Send the photo to info@northsouth.com
- Visit us @northsouthbooks on social media

You can win
a copy of the book
by participating

Warning: Not suitable for children under the age of three.
Use under adult supervision.

*We may publish submitted photos on the social media channels of our publishing company. Those who take part in the competition give their consent.